Greenbelt, Meet Your New Misses

by Mary Larkin

The Miss Greenbelt pageant is one of the most highly anticipated events at the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival. The theme for this year's pageant was "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory." On Friday night, the little misses ignited the stage by dancing as Oompa Loompas, followed by the junior misses as Roald Dahl's memorable character, Veruca Salt. The little miss contestants paraded in top hats as Willy Wonka tossing candy to young onlookers to the tune of "Candyman" from the 1971 film "Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory" before busting into a jazzy move to the big-band sound of Christina Aguilera's version of "Candyman."

On Sunday night, the princesses were the first to grace the stage. The Princess Pageant commenced in 2007 under the direction of Kimberly Wynkoop (Little Miss Greenbelt 1997, Miss Greenbelt 2006) to give the youngest girls ages 2 to 6 a chance to be on stage, with entrance fees going to support the scholarship awards (princes of the same age are also welcome). Next the little, junior and miss contestants filed onto the stage in their evening gowns. Each young woman performed a model walk and then answered a question at the microphone. Though the young women's inner and outer beauty were apparent, it was their brains that shone in this segment of the competition.

The junior and little miss contestants, in particular, are called upon to answer questions about issues that impact community and society. As the judges returned to their stand, the nerves and excitement peaked as Rich Lee, emcee of the festivities for the past 18 years, announced the 2013 winners. These were Little Miss Greenbelt Cynthia Quinton; Junior Miss Greenbelt Yasmyn Switzer; and Miss Greenbelt

City Plans Special Events For October Co-op Month

by Marat Moore

National Co-op Month kicked off October 1 with its message to "Collaborate, Communicate, Cooperate." Greenbelt's seven cooperatives – plus two co-ops in the organizing phase – are offering special events to celebrate the city's history of cooperatives and educate the public about their value to the community. (For dates of events and a comprehensive list of activities, see ad on page 8).

So, quick – can you name the city's seven co-ops? All of them add jobs and services to our community. The co-ops are: Co-op Supermarket; Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI); Greenbelt News Review; Greenbelt Federal Credit Union; Greenbelt Nursery School; New Deal Café; and Rapidan Camps.

The month-long shindig in Greenbelt begins this weekend with two events – a volunteer work weekend at Rapidan Camps in the Shenandoah National Park on October 4 and 5 and a self-guided tour of Greenbelt artists' studios sponsored by the New Deal Café on October 5 and 6. The studio tour will take place from 2 to 5 p.m. both days and a group reception will follow from 7 to 9 p.m. at the New Deal Café. To volunteer at Rapidan this weekend email J.D. Foster at jdfoster1@cox.net or Tom Jones at tom@spril.com.

New this year are educational sessions by residents working on two new co-op ideas: a child care co-op in Franklin Park and a worker-owned composting business.

On October 10, a session on "Cooperative Child Care Options in Franklin Park" will be held from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at Beltway Plaza Academy 8 Theaters, 6198 Greenbelt Road. Two short videos will be shown: "The ABCs of Cooperative Childcare" and "Democracy in the Workplace." A panel discussion will follow. For more information contact Carolyn Lambright-Davis at clambright-davis@yahoo.com or call 240-705-6438.

A session on "Worker-Owned Cooperatives Create Jobs" will be held October 12 from 10:30 a.m. to noon at Old Greenbelt Theatre in Roosevelt Center. Short videos on "How the Worker-Owners of Union Cab Govern Themselves" and "Democracy in the Workplace" will be shown, followed by a panel discussion. For more information email Jim Johnson at jim.johnson@dawn.coop.

In another debut, the new board game Co-opoly – where everybody wins or everybody loses – will be demonstrated at the New Deal Café on October 19 from 2 to 4 p.m.

Enjoy the fall by sampling the diversity of city co-ops. Go to wine tastings at the Co-op Supermarket. Shred old tax returns at the Credit Union's Shredding Day. GHI members don't forget about the upcoming annual picnic this Sunday, October 6 and the GHI-sponsored forum for candidates for Greenbelt City Council on October 15. Join Rapidan Camps to savor the Shenandoah mountains. Learn more about all the co-ops at the Greenbelt Cooperative Alliance booth at the Farmers Market on October 27. Read the News Review to keep up with all these events.

History

Unlike many businesses, co-ops are member-owned and locally operated. The first U.S. co-op was a town mutual insurance company organized in 1752 by the country's most creative founding father, Benjamin Franklin. Co-ops have observed National Co-op Month in October in the U.S. since 1964.

Cooperative health maintenance organizations (HMOs) were organized after passage of the federal HMO Act of 1973 to help consumers address the problems of rising health-care costs and physician shortages. They differ from for-profit HMOs that operate more like health insurance carriers. Co-op HMOs are

Election

Herling and Jordan Join Race for Council Seats

Incumbents Konrad Herling and Emmett Jordan have submitted their biographies for publication in this week's News Review. Their nomination forms have been certified by City Clerk Cindy Murray along with those of incumbents Judith Davis, Leta Mach, Silke Pope, Edward Putens, Rodney Roberts and challengers Susan Stewart and William Orleans.

Biographies of Davis, Putens, Pope and Mach were published in prior weeks. The biographies are prepared by the candidates.

Konrad Herling

Konrad Herling, a lifelong Greenbelt resident, is running for re-election to the Greenbelt City Council. He has served on the City Council since 2003.

Herling, who served previously as council's liaison to the Parks & Recreation Advisory Board, currently serves as council's liaison to the Arts Advisory Board. He also serves as liaison to Greenbelt Access Television and the Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Environmental Sustainability. He serves on the National League of Cities Transportation Infrastructure Committee which has been a major proponent of reinvesting federal funding in the country's infrastructure and transportation systems.

Herling has contributed to efforts to improve the arts, transportation and overall planning throughout the county, state and country. Founder of the Greenbelt Arts Center, he serves on the Board of Directors of the Prince George's County's Arts & Humanities Council, which helps fund arts organizations.

Additionally, he served on the executive committee of Envision Prince George's which identified major concerns to be addressed by the county. He serves as secretary of the Prince George's County Municipal Association and served as one of Greenbelt's representatives to the county's Green Tax Credit Task Force. This task force was created to shape legislation to provide tax credits to attract environmental incubator businesses to locate in Prince George's County and provide incentives for existing businesses to deploy best environmental practices. Legislation derived from the task force's report is now before the county council.

He has served as Greenbelt's representative on the Metropolitan Washington Council of Government's (COG) Climate, Energy and Environment Policy Committee, which is COG's policy adviser on climate change, energy, green building, electric vehicles and recycling.

Herling's volunteer activities, include producing a New Year's program and an international cultural festival, organizing the Greenbelt Arts Center, writing articles for the News Review and interviewing community leaders for Greenbelt Access

2012 Queens Step Down from Their Duties

by Mary Larkin

Little Miss Greenbelt, Ashley Wickline, savored every minute of her busy year, especially appearances at the Artful Afternoons and welcoming home the troops at BWI airport. She will cherish the memories of the past year and the friendships she has formed with her pageant sisters, Caroline and Veronica.

As Junior Miss Greenbelt 2012, Caroline Casey delighted in working with adults and children at the Artful Afternoons. However, the most poignant appearance of her year was welcoming home the troops at BWI airport. The experience made her appreciate the sacrifices made by members of the armed services.

“When I saw the troops come home to their families,” she said, “it really had an impact on me. It was really neat seeing some of the kids welcome home their parents. It made me cry.”

Serving as Junior Miss Greenbelt also gave Caroline the confidence to speak her mind on topics important to her and to be more community-focused. “I love Greenbelt,” she says.

The favorite activity of Miss Greenbelt 2012, Veronica Handunge, was being a volunteer model for the Daffodils and Diamonds fashion show luncheon. The organization raises funds for breast and ovarian cancer research.

Veronica raised more than $1,000 for her charitable platform, Bridge 2 Peace, an organization that builds schools as well as rehabilitates and reintegrates child soldiers into their communities in Sri Lanka.

In addition to the scholarship funds she received as Miss Greenbelt, Veronica was the recipient of a distinguished Gates Millennium Scholarship. This August, she began her freshman year at Columbia University. She plans to study neuroscience.

Organization

The Miss Greenbelt pageant has been a staple of the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival since its inception in 1955, a year after the first annual festival took place in Greenbelt Center. The pageant has evolved with the times, first as an old-fashioned hometown beauty pageant and then as a modern and unique scholarship pageant highlighting professional interviewing, public speaking skills and volunteering in the community.

Under the direction of Natasha Chavrid Jewell (Miss Greenbelt 1983), the Miss Greenbelt Pageant was renamed the Miss Greenbelt Scholarship Organization in 2012, when it was incorporated as a 501(c)3 nonprofit organization.

Over $5,000 worth of scholarships and gifts are granted each year to title winners and the runners-up, as well as to recipients of special recognitions in several categories. Two such honors are the Tessa Osborne scholarship for a Junior Miss contestant and an award for the Miss Greenbelt contestant with the highest grade point average.

According to Jewell, the mission of the Miss Greenbelt Scholarship Organization is to “promote the future of young women by providing both opportunities to serve the community and financial support through scholarship awards for their continuing education.

The goal is to develop leaders through these opportunities and support the development of their skills and abilities of women via higher education. We will continue to support and encourage the young women of our community to develop personally, academically and professionally.”

On Screen Finding Their Way in Midstream

Opening at Old Greenbelt Theatre on Friday, October 4 is “Enough Said,” wherein Albert and Eva, each a divorced parent of a college-bound daughter, meet and mix – and match? – under the practiced hand of writer-director Nicole Holofcener (“Walking and Talking,” “Friends with Money”). The late James Gandolfini plays Albert, an academic; Julia Louis-Dreyfus is Eva, a masseuse. Her best friend, Sarah (Toni Collette), gets the two together in a film that has garnered high marks for a wide-ranging exploration of human connections in these times.

PG-13, with sexual content and brief strong language. Running time: 92 minutes.

GATE Launches New Music Video Project

Greenbelt Access Television (GATE), which is shown on Verizon channel 19 and Comcast channel 77, is using its recently increased production capabilities by launching a project that invites area singers, musicians and video creators to participate in an upcoming Music Video Production Project (MVPP), Edition One.

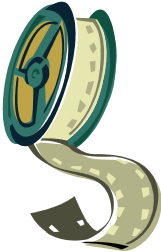

The MVPP is designed to give area singers and musicians an inexpensive way to obtain a high-grade music video that would otherwise cost thousands while providing video producer/directors with access to GATE’s high-definition video cameras and top-of-the-line editing computers.

To participate, performers and video producer/directors should apply and provide samples of their work by Friday, November 1. As many as four producers and six performers will be selected by November 9 to participate. Participants must be GATE members. A nominal fee applies for Greenbelt residents. An editing class and a camera operation class may also be required for those producing the videos. More information is at GATE’s website, www.greenbelttv.org.

“We’ve recently had a massive increase in our production capabilities here at GATE,” said GATE Executive Director Malia Murray, “and this project will show everyone what our new equipment can do. It will also generate high-quality content for our cable channel and showcase some of the outstanding musical talent we have here in Greenbelt and the surrounding communities.”

“It will be a win-win for the participants and the city,” said William Cornett, who along with Murray will act as an executive producer on the project. “By attracting the best area performers and videographers, we will show that our community not only has first-rate creative talent, but also the ability and the resources to produce first-rate videos that present it to the world.”

“For singers who need a professional recording of their work, we have engaged the services of a professional recording studio and world-class musicians, at an extremely low cost,” said Murray. There is a fee.

Sunday, October 13 from 2 to 4 p.m. there will be an informal listening party at the New Deal Café for the new CD of Café familiar jazz and blues pianist John Guernsey. All are invited and light refreshments will be served.

Guernsey, who holds down the usual 6:30 to 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday evening slot at the New Deal Café, has released a double CD of his own compositions called “Dreams Gone By” on the Sweet Breeze recording label. It features area musicians including: David Schulman on violin, Halley Shoenberg on reeds and flute and Katy Gaughan (who also plays with Djesben) on percussion.

The 21-song CD is an eclectic group of songs featuring different instruments playing the melody while the other instruments play counterpoint and chord structure. Throughout them Guernsey’s piano is heard playing rhythm and lead. Two special songs from the CD are “Isabel,” inspired by the New Deal waitress and “Good-bye Tommy G,” a tribute to Guernsey’s talented brother who died last year of ALS.

Annual Senior Open Forum Hears Diverse Concerns

by Connor Brooks

Greenbelt seniors and other residents expressed their concerns to members of the Greenbelt City Council at the Greenbelt Senior Open Forum on Saturday, September 28 at the Greenbelt Community Center. These comments are compiled and put in the form of a report for the council.

The meeting began with a discussion about exercise programs. Many attendees expressed the desire to exercise more and supported more active lifestyles.

“There should be a ban on sitting,” declared Bill Norwood.

Mayor Judith Davis suggested urging the Prince George’s Community College to improve its exercise program offerings. “That may be where the council can focus some of its help,” she said.

The next issue discussed was public transportation. It was noted that the city has reached agreement with the University of Maryland to enable Greenbelt residents to ride university shuttle buses if they purchase an annual $10 pass.

The Greenbelt Farmers Market and its community booth received a great deal of praise from forum attendees. Sylvia Lewis said the community booth was a “wonderful way of reaching everyone in the community.”

An attendee proposed setting up a low-powered FM radio station for the city. The station would have a broadcasting radius of three-and-a-half miles and would need volunteers to operate.

Councilmember Konrad Herling explained that low-powered FM radio stations are “stations run of, by and for the people.” The station would require verification from the state to operate as a nonprofit organization.

Other attendees proposed starting a bike share similar to one that operates in Washington, D.C. Davis said there would have to be a strong enough demand for it to be successful but the city is exploring it as a possibility.

“I’d like to have something like that in Greenbelt,” said Councilmember Emmett Jordan, then adding, “I don’t think we’re there yet.”

Another topic was the possible move of FBI headquarters to Greenbelt. Although any move would be years away, the mayor said the FBI would attract offices and retail stores to the area.

Toward the end of the meeting, taxes became a topic of debate. Some attendees argued that high taxes caused people to relocate while others argued that many public services would not be available without such taxes.

Senior Citizen Advisory Committee member David West spoke of the importance of holding the Senior Forum every year. “I think it is very important. If its going to continue like this we’re going to need a second one.”

Golden Age Club

by Bunny Fitzgerald

Active Aging Week in Greenbelt is now over and was a great success. Golden Age Club members took part in many activities. One of them was the fashion show – many people enjoyed the show, with all those beautiful outfits and “Super Models.” Everyone had a good time.

The speaker on Wednesday, October 9 will be Dan Hamlin, who will tell us about his travels in Vietnam.

Let’s keep Cathie and Pat Brannan in our prayers and hope for good weather for our Yard-Bake Sale this Saturday, October 5. It’s the annual fundraiser for the Golden Age Club.

Condolences to neighbors and friends of Michael Reynolds, formerly of 49 Court Ridge, who died in Costa Rica on Tuesday, October 1, 2013.

Congratulations to:

– Greenbelt CERT coordinator Kenneth Silberman, who spoke at the September 28 Individual and Family Preparedness panel of the county’s 2013 Emergency Preparedness Conference: Creating Resilient Communities on special preparation needs for those with functional and access needs that was held at the First Baptist Church of Glenarden in Landover.

– New Deal Café regular jazz and blues pianist John Guernsey on his newly-issued CD of his own compositions called “Dreams Gone By” that also includes performances by other local musicians on violin, reeds, flute and percussion on the Sweet Breeze recording label.

Television. As a member of the Community Relations Advisory Board in 2001, he helped develop the city’s Community Pledge which urges citizens to treat all with respect and to celebrate Greenbelt’s diversity.

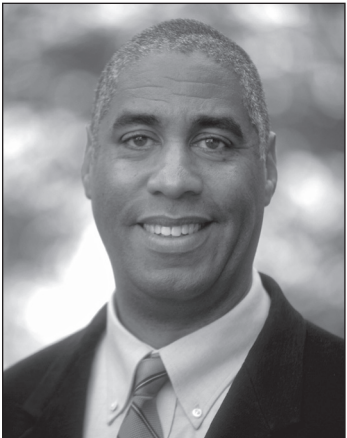

Herling, a graduate of Towson University, with a B.A. in U.S. History and Secondary Education, is a communications analyst with the Federal Communications Commission for whom he has worked since 1977. He also worked two summers with the Public Works Department as part of the city’s summer employment program in 1970 and 1973. He has lived most of his life in an original Greenbelt home but also lived six years in Franklin Park, formerly known as Springhill Lake, where he served as vice president of its civic association.

Emmett Jordan

Emmett V. Jordan is a two-term member of City Council, currently serving as mayor pro tem. He seeks re-election to continue his work on behalf of the citizens of Greenbelt.

Jordan relocated to the area in 1998 to work with the University of Maryland. He decided to move to Greenbelt (Greenbriar Condominiums) because of its access to transportation, recreational amenities, shopping and its park-like atmosphere.

In 2009 he became the first African-American elected to City Council in Greenbelt’s then 72 year history.

Emmett Jordan

A native of Cincinnati, he studied liberal arts and music at Morehouse College and at the University of Cincinnati, where he earned a bachelor of science in urban administration from the College of Design Art, Architecture and Planning. He has completed additional graduate work in Public Administration at Seton Hall University.

Jordan participated in the University of Maryland Legacy Leadership Institute on Municipal Government in 2009 and completed the University of Maryland Academy of Excellence in Local Governance training certificate program in 2011.

In his professional life, Jordan has worked for a wide variety of nonprofit organizations, including the Smithsonian Institution, University of Maryland at College Park and the United Negro College Fund. Since 2005 he has run his own business as an independent contractor, providing professional services related to marketing, communications, strategic planning and fund development.

Jordan’s career has encompassed more than 25 years of experience managing projects and coordinating volunteer boards for nonprofits and associations. He was a member of the Association of Fundraising Professionals (a nonprofit industry trade organization) for more than two decades, serving on the Washington, D.C. chapter board from 2004 to 2008.

Jordan is the son of an educator and a social service administrator. He was raised in the progressive tradition of the Unitarian Church. He attends Reid Temple AME Church occasionally, and he actively supports community events and fund-raisers for local congregations of all denominations in Greenbelt.

Jordan is a member of the Human Service Coalition of Prince George’s County and is a frequent participant in Maryland Association of Nonprofit Organizations and the Center for Nonprofit Advancement programs.

Jordan has served as liaison to the Advisory Planning Board, Community Relations Advisory Board and Greenbelt Access Television. He represents Greenbelt on committees including the Maryland Municipal League Legislative Committee, the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments Transportation Planning Board and the National League of Cities Community and Economic Development Steering Committee. He is the current vice president of the Prince George’s County Municipal Association.

Jordan finished a four-year term on the Greenbelt Community Foundation board in 2010, having served as chairman for two years. He continues to volunteer his time and expertise with GCF, teaching grant-writing workshops to community members on a regular basis.

He also is a member and advocate for Transit Riders United of Greenbelt and a board member of Greenbelt Inter-generational Volunteer Exchange Service and a former co-chair of the Greenbelt Tennis Association.

He is the current president of the Eleanor and Franklin Roosevelt Democratic Club and has represented the 22nd Legislative District on the Maryland Democratic Central Committee since 2011. He worked as a Prince George’s County Election Judge (in College Park) from 2004 to 2008.

Prior to 2009 Jordan was a member of the city’s Advisory Planning Board where he spearheaded the efforts to update the city’s bicycle and pedestrian plan. He served on his home owner’s association board, Phase I of Greenbriar Condominium Association, for five years, including two terms as treasurer.

An energetic 56-year-old, Jordan enjoys attending concerts, art exhibits and cultural programs. His favorite pastimes include playing the guitar and spending time outdoors around Greenbelt playing tennis or bicycling.

Meet Scaly Creatures At the Reptile Wrap-Up

On Sunday, October 13 at 3 p.m. the College Park Arts Exchange will sponsor a Reptile-Wrap-Up with the Maryland Department of Natural Resources at the Old Parish House, 4711 Knox Road, College Park. These scaly creatures will captivate audiences ages three and up as the group shares myths, histories and the benefits of these often misunderstood animals. All children must be accompanied by an adult. The program is free but registration is suggested since space is limited. For more information, email info@cpae.org or call 301-927-3013.

Hear Star Stories At the Planetarium

On Friday, October 11 at 7:30 p.m. the Howard B. Owens Science Center will host a free planetarium show called “Star Stories and Stellar Science” for parents, students and community members.

The stars of autumn offer a wealth of mythology from different world cultures. The show will cover several examples, such as the Japanese Tanabata festival, celebrating the love between the stars Vega (a weaver girl) and Altair (a cowboy). In Hindu astronomy, four stars in Pegasus are actually a bed where the Moon can rest. Learn to identify these stars and others in the autumn night sky and discover the intriguing science behind them.

For more information call 301-918-8750 or email russell.waugh@pgcps.org.

not-for-profit health care providers that own medical facilities and employ medical staff.

Rural electric, telephone and cable co-ops were formed when the cost of expanding service to rural areas discouraged for-profit utilities from serving these areas. In 1936 a year before he helped found Greenbelt – President Franklin Roosevelt signed the act establishing the Rural Electrification Administration as a lending agency to finance the extension of electrical systems to rural areas.

The credit union movement was launched in the U.S. in the early 1900s by men and women determined to find a solution to the financial service problems of America’s working class.

Greenbelters may be benefiting from American co-ops by purchasing Ocean Spray cranberry juice, Sun-Maid raisins and Land O’Lakes butter; buying tools at ACE Hardware stores or reading articles syndicated by the Associated Press. All are cooperatively owned businesses.

Volunteers Pick Up Trash, Plant and Mulch around Greenbelt Lake

by Elaine Hunt
and Morgan Eichensehr

On a sunny Saturday morning, residents of Greenbelt picked up trash, planted and mulched native plants and helped build a new log damming system at Buddy Attick Lake Park September 28 for National Public Lands Day. Volunteers with kayaks and canoes also plucked trash from the water around the edge of the lake.

Public Works personnel estimated that about 20 volunteers, including a few Girl Scout troops and several city councilmembers, helped out at the event.

Brian Townsend, event organizer and horticultural specialist, said that the effort was “excellent” and that the participants had accomplished everything he had hoped for.

Volunteers planted native plants to secure the soil around the lake. Among the plants were Asters, Black-eyed Susans and Little Henrys. The participants then carted mulch in wheelbarrows to protect the new plantings.

Residents Angelique Crusoe and Pam Goddard helped with the project.

“I have been to almost every Earth Day and Public Lands Day in Greenbelt for about five years,” said Goddard.

Crusoe said she was new to Greenbelt but she was starting to get involved in the community and this seemed like a good way to help.

Volunteers also constructed a new log-damming system that will attempt to prevent further erosion. Logs were placed in an alternating pattern down an embankment where erosion has been depositing sediment into the lake. This area was then filled in with mulch. Townsend said this hopefully will slow down water as it flows through this area and in turn slow down the course of erosion.

Charles Jackman, a member of the Advisory Committee on Trees spent the day picking up trash and recyclables around the lake. He said it was his third year helping at the event and that he thought it was good for the community at large.

“I like to see the community cleaned up,” said Jackman.

National Public Lands Day is celebrated across the country by volunteers working to restore and clean up public lands. This was its 20th year.

Residents Angelique Crusoe (left) and Pam Goddard helped by planting flowers along the banks and filling in the surrounding areas with mulch.

Charles Jackman, Advisory Committee on Trees member, spent the day picking up trash and recyclables around the lake. This was his third year at the event.

Philip Larkin on Greenbelt Lake picked up trash in and around the lake by way of kayak. He said that he was mostly finding recyclables and stray tennis balls from the nearby courts.

Volunteers and Public Works employees worked to build a new damming system that is hoped to slow down the flow of water over this area.

Sarah Larkin.

Perhaps the biggest highlight of the weekend is unseen by the audience. Immediately following the crowning, the young ladies head to the American Legion in Greenbelt for pizza and partying. As the music turns on, the heels are kicked off and a great celebration ensues.

On Monday morning, the winners and contestants exchanged waves with well-wishers at the Labor Day Parade. For the winners, this is only the beginning. Cynthia, Yasmyn and Sarah will spend the next year at dozens of appearances in service to the community.

For pageant director Natasha Chavrid Jewell and her dedicated cadre of 12 including former misses and parents of former misses, there will be a short reprieve before preparing for next summer's pageant. Then next June, the hard work will begin again with a fresh group of young women.

Though not all will emerge with a title or scholarship at the end of the Labor Day weekend 2014, the young competitors can be assured of creating lasting friendships, learning valuable life skills and having a fantastic summer.

Little Miss Greenbelt

Cynthia Quinton is an 8-year-old third grader at Greenbelt Elementary School. She is an active Greenbelt girl, swimming for the Barracudas and playing for Greenbelt Baseball. She also studies several different dance disciplines, including ballet, hip-hop and lyrical. Along with her duties as Little Miss Greenbelt, she is making time to join the St. Hugh's children's choir. Cynthia has participated in the pageant for six years, including three in the Princess Pageant and three competing in the Little Miss category.

When asked about the competition, she said it is "fun and games" preparing and rehearsing "but when you are on stage, you get really focused." This focus and confidence in public speaking was honed by show-and-tell sessions during weekly pageant rehearsals over the summer.

When the announcement was made that she had been chosen to be Little Miss Greenbelt, Cynthia was "excited and shocked" and full of anticipation about who her pageant sisters would be. She "cried tears of joy" when she heard Yasmyn's and Sarah's names announced, because she knew they would guide her in any way that she needed over the next year.

She "cried tears of joy" when she heard Yasmyn's and Sarah's names announced, because she knew they would guide her in any way that she needed over the next year.

Cynthia is looking forward to her appearances this year, particularly monthly Artful Afternoons at the Greenbelt Community Center, welcoming home the troops and "seeing Santa and the Easter Bunny."

Cynthia's response to her on-stage question about what superpower she would like to have was "to fly, so that I could see everything from up above." That dream may never come to fruition but undoubtedly her next year as Little Miss Greenbelt will broaden her horizons.

Cynthia's sponsor was St. Hugh's Knights of Columbus.

Junior Miss Greenbelt

Yasmyn Switzer is a 12-year-old seventh grader at Robert Goddard Montessori School. She won the title of Little Miss Greenbelt in 2011, her first year competing in the pageant. This was her first year competing in the Junior Miss Category. Yasmyn relished her role as Little Miss and was anxious to "wear the crown again" and "serve as a role model for kids and help my community."

Yasmyn delivered a prodigious response to her on-stage question with a level of maturity and insight more typical of the older girls. To her, integrity means "strength of character, honesty and loyalty to one's word. It is having a strong sense of morals, being consistent and making sure your words are the same as your actions."

"I personally maintain integrity by sticking to my word, being punctual in my daily activities and striving to fulfill all my goals and commitments," she said. "Integrity is important not only for an individual but also for the greater good of society. If our government and businesses ran with principles of integrity, it would make our society a safer and stronger place." The audience responded with rousing applause.

In addition to her duties as Junior Miss Greenbelt, Yasmyn will keep busy with school, dance and gymnastics. She hopes to make time in her schedule as well for a part in Greenbelt's winter youth musical production.

The appearances she most looks forward to are the Artful Afternoons because she loves assisting younger kids with projects. She already is enthusiastic about next summer's pageant and the opportunity to help prepare the next group of junior misses for success.

Yasmyn's sponsor was Physician's Family Practice.

Miss Greenbelt

Sarah Larkin is a 17-year-old senior at Elizabeth Seton High School in Bladensburg. A third-generation Greenbelter, she formerly represented the city in 2009 as Junior Miss Greenbelt. She has participated in the pageant for a total of nine years. "It is a wonderful opportunity to make friends," she said, "and I wanted the chance to represent my community." Sarah will balance the busy year as Miss Greenbelt with college applications and interviews. She credits the pageant with imparting a skill set that will ease that process. Sarah says, "The directors of the pageant teach the girls how to put their best foot forward, on paper and in person."

On crowning night, Sarah answered a question about same-sex schools as an alternative to co-ed schools. As an attendee of a school for young women, she said that same-sex schools can be a preferable alternative to co-ed schools, justifying her position in terms of academics and funding for sports. Her comment that a same-sex school environment allows her to "excel in her studies without the distraction of the opposite gender" elicited uproarious laughter from the audience.

As Miss Greenbelt, Sarah will raise funds for her chosen charity, the Crohn's and Colitis Foundation of America. The cause is very personal, as Sarah this past summer was diagnosed with Crohn's disease. The foundation sponsors a camp for children and teens coping with the diagnosis of their disease.

As for her appearances over the next year, Sarah most anticipates working with young children in the community at events like the Artful Afternoons. She also is looking forward to spending time with her younger pageant sisters, Yasmyn and Cynthia.

Sarah's sponsor was Realty 1. Mary Larkin is the mother of Miss Greenbelt Sarah Larkin.
